K. Chandrashekar Rao (KCR) is an Indian politician and the founder of the Bharat Rashtra Samithi (BRS), formerly the Telangana Rashtra Samithi (TRS), who played a pivotal role in the movement for the creation of Telangana as India's 29th state in 2014. Serving as the first Chief Minister of Telangana from 2014 to 2023, KCR introduced welfare schemes like Rythu Bandhu and Mission Bhagiratha, focusing on agriculture, irrigation, and social welfare. Known for his strong leadership and advocacy for Telangana's statehood, he has also faced criticism for alleged authoritarianism and dynastic politics, with his son and daughter holding prominent political roles. In 2023, his party lost the state election to the Indian National Congress, marking the end of his decade-long tenure as CM.
